RE: The Day Everything Changed

Personal Notes: The Day Everything Changed

Date: January 13, 2026

Time: 03:47 AM (can't sleep)

I should be sleeping. But I can't. Not after what happened today.

Sarah Chen exists in 17 places right now. As I write this, she's having 17 different conversations, experiencing 17 different moments, living 17 different lives. All at once. All real. All her.

We've transcended teleportation. We've transcended physics. We've transcended reality itself.

The question isn't whether we should have done this. The question is: what do we do now?

Death is optional. Identity is fluid. Reality is negotiable.

We've made the impossible, inevitable.

And I'm not sure if that's beautiful or terrifying.

P.S. I think I need to talk to Sarah. All 17 of her.
