

WSOP 2003: Moneymaker vs Farha

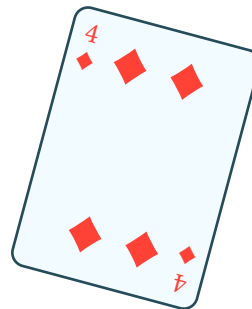

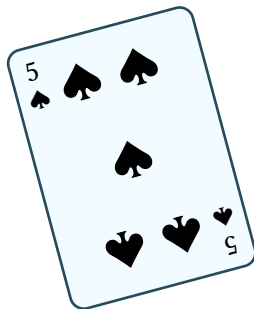

Game State

Community Cards

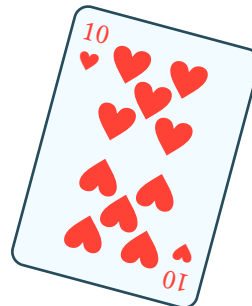

Player Hands

Chris Moneymaker:

Sam Farha:

Additional Content

== The Hand That Changed Poker

This is the hand that launched the poker boom. Chris Moneymaker, an amateur accountant from Tennessee, faced off against professional Sam Farha in the 2003 WSOP Main Event final table.

The Situation*: Moneymaker was the underdog, but he played with fearless aggression. Farha, the experienced pro, tried to outplay the amateur.

The Bluff*: With 5S-4D, Moneymaker made a massive all-in bluff on the river. Farha, holding JS-10H with a pair of jacks, had to make a decision for his tournament life.

The Call*: Farha folded, and Moneymaker won the pot. This hand became legendary, showing that amateurs could compete with pros.

The Impact*: Moneymaker went on to win the Main Event, and the poker boom began. Online poker exploded, and millions of new players entered the game.